JUDGE LUTON: Today is Friday, January 21, 1994.

It's 10:00 in the morning. The prehearing conference in the Presque Isle, Main proceeding was scheduled for yesterday, January 20th. Of course, the entire government was closed yesterday, so we weren't able to have the conference. We attempted to guess that the parties might appear today at 10:00 in the morning so that we could have our conference, not surprising that they didn't since they had no way of knowing what our intentions were with respect to holding this conference.

We thought that we'd have to try anyhow since the residence address of one of the participants is Eugene, Oregon and if somebody has come all the way across the country for the purpose of attending a conference, we ought at least try. But under the circumstances, we're not able to hold a conference, consequently we will not, and the conference will be rescheduled. That's all. Thank you.

(Whereupon, at 10:01 a.m. on Friday, January 21, 1994, the prehearing conference adjourned.)
